Dear Joany,

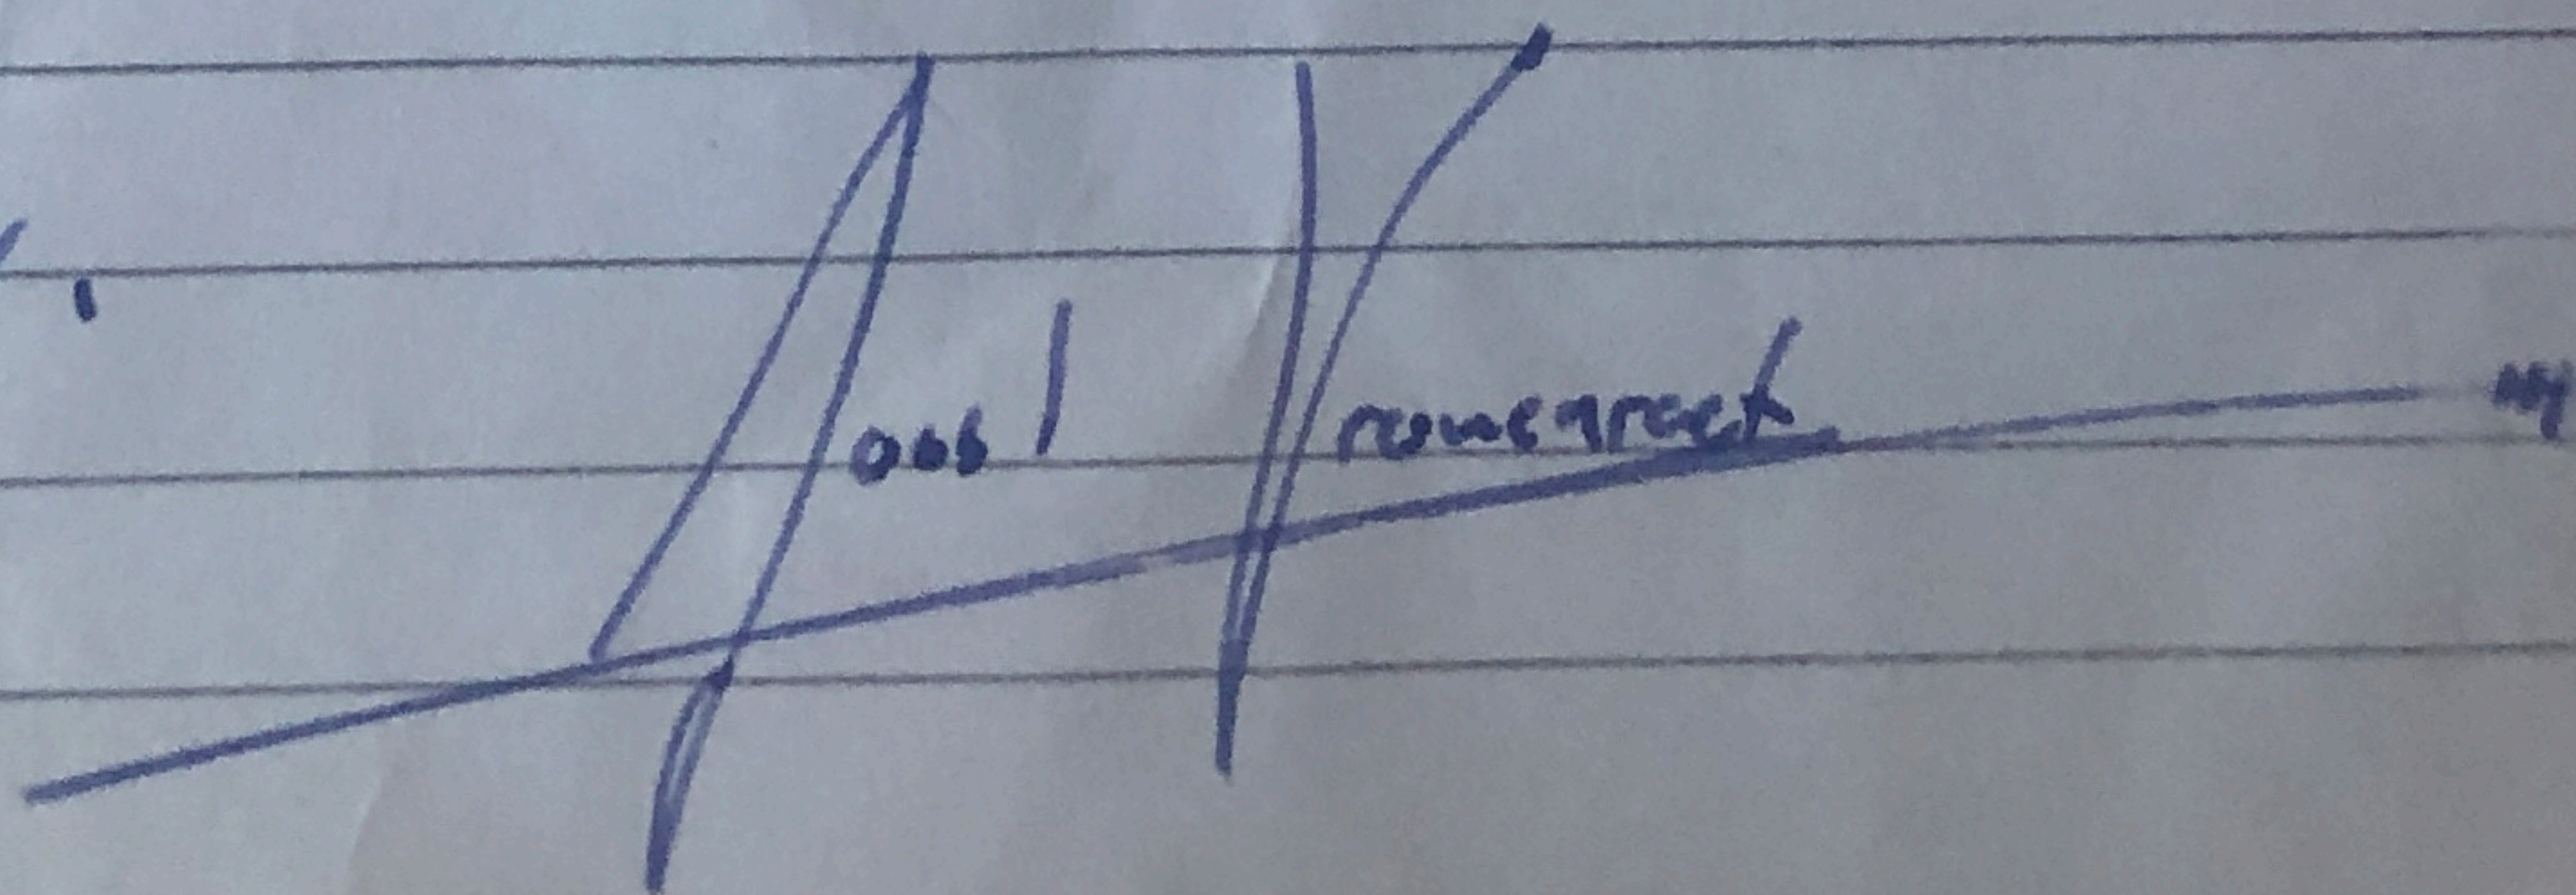

Well... Now we will hit the last day of this week of research! And we did so much, yet we zoomed into small dots where all is catalyzed from. We talked and talked, shared experiences, imagination, ideas, sensations, desires and visions. Thought this week would mostly be research, but I see it turned out to become very productive in the sense of generating materiality of the solo.

You are grasping the stuff fully and with total commitment. I see you reflecting on it from as many different angles you can. And it is very satisfying to see how reflections like our talk on Shakespeare and Hamlet nourish the process, although ~~these~~ these conversations were not intentionally having to have bring a parameter for the work or a specific section in the work. So ~~undirected~~ unintended unintentional and undirectional parameters are finding their way into the work and instigate deepening and growth of quality.

Then, we are also accurate in setting the parameters ~~as~~ in a meticulous and well-articulate matter. I asked you yesterday if you find me clear in my directions and sharing of my thoughts. You were straight forward and didn't hesitate in saying that I am clear on the floor in the flow of keeping 'the wheel turning'. That says something about me, and about you Joany. You are able to ~~soft~~ hear, receive and reflect upon the things I give you, you allow the informations to enter your brain and body. That is a gift for the both of us, but even a bigger gift for the work, because my goal ALWAYS is that the work should transcend myself and you. I will not stop take distance from the work until it has transcended ~~me~~ me. So... there's still much to do 😊! Alright, let's hit it today!

Yours sincerely,

 Maceira
