Understanding, respect and tolerance are important when we are dealing with different cultures and lifestyles. Although the SMART group's lifestyle differs from the values of mainstream society, they are also ordinary people with their own emotions and the need to be respected. Respecting the SMART group means giving them equal opportunities and respecting their choices, without discriminating and marginalising them because of their appearance and lifestyles.

The working people of SMART have put in a lot of effort to survive and their own ideals, facing the hardships of work and the difficulties of life. Under such circumstances, it is all the more important for us to give them respect and support and encourage them to stick to their beliefs and pursue their dreams.

This is not only a sign of respect for the SMART community, but also a sign of respect for the pluralistic culture and way of life of human beings, which is an important force for social progress and development.
