

Fraser, P., Harrison, F., Fels, L. (2016). Art For? Framing the Conversation with Steven Hill. Simon Fraser University.

This digital video seeks to unpack the objectivity of the researcher and offers a field of visual play that formally furthers Steven Hill's theorizing on the idea of frames and what predetermines the frames we bring to the project as it pertains to art and art for social change. This process in and of itself becomes an action site of research.

This video features an individual interview conducted for the Art for Social Change Research Project with director, actor, and creator Steven Hill. Steven and artist/researcher Patti Fraser shared a history of collaboration that dated back to the AIDS activist movement in North American in the late 1980's. They collaborated together for a number of years with activist groups like the World Aids Group in order to create interactive and provocative work on issues relating to AIDS, particularly with vulnerable youth. Steven Hill<sup>1</sup> is currently Co-Artistic Director of Fight with a Stick and Associate Professor in Theatre Performance in the School for Contemporary Arts at Simon Fraser University in Vancouver, British Columbia, Canada.

This video is published in Arts/Research International: A Transdisciplinary Journal
University of Alberta, Issue 1, Vol.1.

Artists Speak www.icasc.ca

---