

Aesthetic oxymoron or fruitful relationship?

Building Bridges between contemporary composers and the classically trained singers

Singing and composing Modern Vocal Music with Classical Vocal Training

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1. Introduction

- 1.1. Spotting the problem
  - 1.1.1. Singing the unsingable
  - 1.1.2. An instrumental metaphor/ analogy
  - 1.1.3. Research Questions?
- 1.2. Personal background
  - 1.2.1. Why me?
  - 1.2.2. What do I do?
  - 1.2.3. What to do?
- 1.3. The process
  - 1.3.1. The two worlds – an inner need to unite
  - 1.3.2. Setting borders, choosing frames
  - 1.3.3. What to expect?
  - 1.3.4. Where could it lead? – A guide for composers and singers

2. The Composer-Singer Relationship – a broken bridge or a cliff

- 2.1. A brief look at a long relationship
  - 2.1.1. The birth of separation – Machaut, religion and service
  - 2.1.2. The ‘missing link’ – troubadours, trouvaies
  - 2.1.3. Soloist or chorist – mistress or master (the topic to put aside)
  - 2.1.4. The first tilt – the birth of stars (Castrati)
  - 2.1.5. The lied - Is there more to it, than church and opera?
  - 2.1.6. Growth - How bigger buildings made bigger people
- 2.2. The 20th Century – the separation
  - 2.2.1. The ‘break up’ – Here honey, a gym membership for Xmas!
‘Did I become too fat now?’
  - 2.2.2. New techniques
  - 2.2.3. New genres
  - 2.2.4. New acoustics
- 2.3. The 21st Century
  - 2.3.1. Unique, honest, connected
  - 2.3.2. Local and global

2.3.3. Aesthetic choices, technical opportunities

3. The Composer's Side

- 3.1. General (mis)beliefs
- 3.2. 'What do I feed it with?'
  - how much do composers know about singers in general?
- 3.3. The aesthetics of the preferred voice
- 3.4. A few examples of aesthetics
  - 3.4.1. Kurtág – the 'extreme' as a performance experience
  - 3.4.2. Ligeti – Mission impossible as virtuosity
(Dance Macabre, Barbara Hannigan)
  - 3.4.3. Andriessen – no vibrato!
- 3.5. The interview for composers
  - Attachment: Interviews with composers
- 3.6.

4. The singer's side

- 4.1. Classical vocal training
- 4.2. Where and when does modern music come in the picture?
- 4.3. Different genres, different techniques?
- 4.4. Thinking and singing
- 4.5. 'No,no,no' – why am I here then?
- 4.6. Cathy Barberian – singing everything, everything that is singing

5. Case studies

- 5.1. Louis Andriessen: De Materie
  - 5.1.1. The request, the task, the sources
  - 5.1.2. The role
  - 5.1.3. Preparing
  - 5.1.4. Coaching – by Marcel Beekman
- 5.2. Gyula Csapó: Trilce V
  - 5.2.1. The vocal analysis
  - 5.2.2. The challenge – being in constant in-between
  - 5.2.3. Different solutions (Premiere, Recording, Experiment)

6. When in the middle

- 6.1. My own singers' ideal as composer before starting to learn singing
- 6.2. Singing with a composer's ear – playing a synthesizer or piano?
- 6.3. Composing with a singer's ear – after after tasting your own pudding
- 6.4. The last scene of Twin Peaks – when the guy looking at me in the mirror grabs me
- 6.5. The transforming – 'Second year Vocal Project'
- 6.6. Becoming fluent in changing sides – a longer ripening process

7. When in-between

- 7.1. The specialist
- 7.2. Vocal coaching at Young Composers' Meeting
  - 7.2.1. Personal background
  - 7.2.2. Helping the singers
  - 7.2.3. A lecture for composers
  - 7.2.4. Feedback of participants
- 7.3. Teaching 'Composing for Vocal Ensemble'
  - 7.3.1. Preparing the composers
  - 7.3.2. Working with the singers
  - 7.3.3. Feedback of participants

8. Conclusions – a guide for composers and singers who work together

- 8.1. The beauty and the beast of collaboration
  - 8.1.1. The most personal instrument – the person itself
  - 8.1.2. Unheard – uncompered and uncomparable
  - 8.1.3. Fruitful relations
- 8.2. Thoughts for the creator
  - 8.2.1. 'But Cathy could sing anything!' – Thinking in parameters
  - 8.2.2. 'But I can also do it!' – or, the power of self-testing
  - 8.2.3. Brain and pain – notate only the necessary
  - 8.2.4. Intention – the real motor of the voice (kissing example)
- 8.3. A few thoughts for the singer
  - 8.3.1. Detecting desires- what do you want?
  - 8.3.2. Setting up reachable goals– needs, wishes, dreams
  - 8.3.3. Health above all – Practicing the 'Sure, honey' face
  - 8.3.4. Being caring or, how should I ask/confront/kill a composer?
- 8.4. Questionnaire: What should I ask? How should I answer?
- 8.5. Closing thoughts

9. Appendix

- 9.1. Interviews
  - 9.1.1. Singers
    - 9.1.1.1. Claron McFadden
    - 9.1.1.2. Noah Frenkel
    - 9.1.1.3. Marcel Beekman
  - 9.1.2. Composers
    - 9.1.2.1. Louis Andriessen
    - 9.1.2.2. Yannis Kyriakides
    - 9.1.2.3. Gyula Csapó

- 9.1.3. Teachers, collaborators
  - 9.1.3.1. Martijn Padding – composing teacher
  - 9.1.3.2. Sasja Hunnago – singing teacher
  - 9.1.3.3. Katalin Koltai – guitarist of Csapó piece
- 9.1.4. Students surveys
  - 9.1.4.1. Composers - Young Composers Meeting
  - 9.1.4.2. Singers – Young Composers Meeting
  - 9.1.4.3. Composers - Vocal Ensemble project
  - 9.1.4.4. Singers – Vocal Ensemble project

10. Media

- 10.1. Excerpts of mentioned vocal pieces
- 10.2. Excerpts of own pieces
- 10.3. Louis Andriessen: De Materie
  - 10.3.1. Youtube - The precedent recording
  - 10.3.2. Audio - The Hague own performance
  - 10.3.3. Audio - Utrecht own performance
  - 10.3.4. Audio - Showing the development
    - a series of recordings from vocal lessons
- 10.4. Gyula Csapó: Trilce
  - 10.4.1. Video recording of the 'recording session'
  - 10.4.2. Audio of premier
  - 10.4.3. Critic from Hungarian newspaper?
  - 10.4.4. New recording – to be made (Kata!)
- 10.5. Young Composers Meeting
  - 10.5.1. Audio recordings of pieces
  - 10.5.2. Photo of giving lecture
  - 10.5.3. Slide show 'Composing for the voice'
- 10.6. Vocal Ensemble Project
  - 10.6.1. Audio of pieces