

I am no longer a stranger here neither do I belong nor do I not belong my message here is to look gather what it is that we have seen because we have crossed the river the wind offers only a numb pondering of cold no longer expecting more than what has been given nor wondering how it happened that I came to this place there is no way to clear the haze in which we observe no way to know that we have undergone another day the silent snow of thought melts before it has a chance to stick where I am is anyone's guess the gates to nowhere multiply and the present is so far away so deeply far away

I anticipate the fallout of our gestures too late to recreate my misreading only to see there is a flaw not in the sense that it is less than perfect rather that it is unconsidered left unnoticed
left unopened
left untold

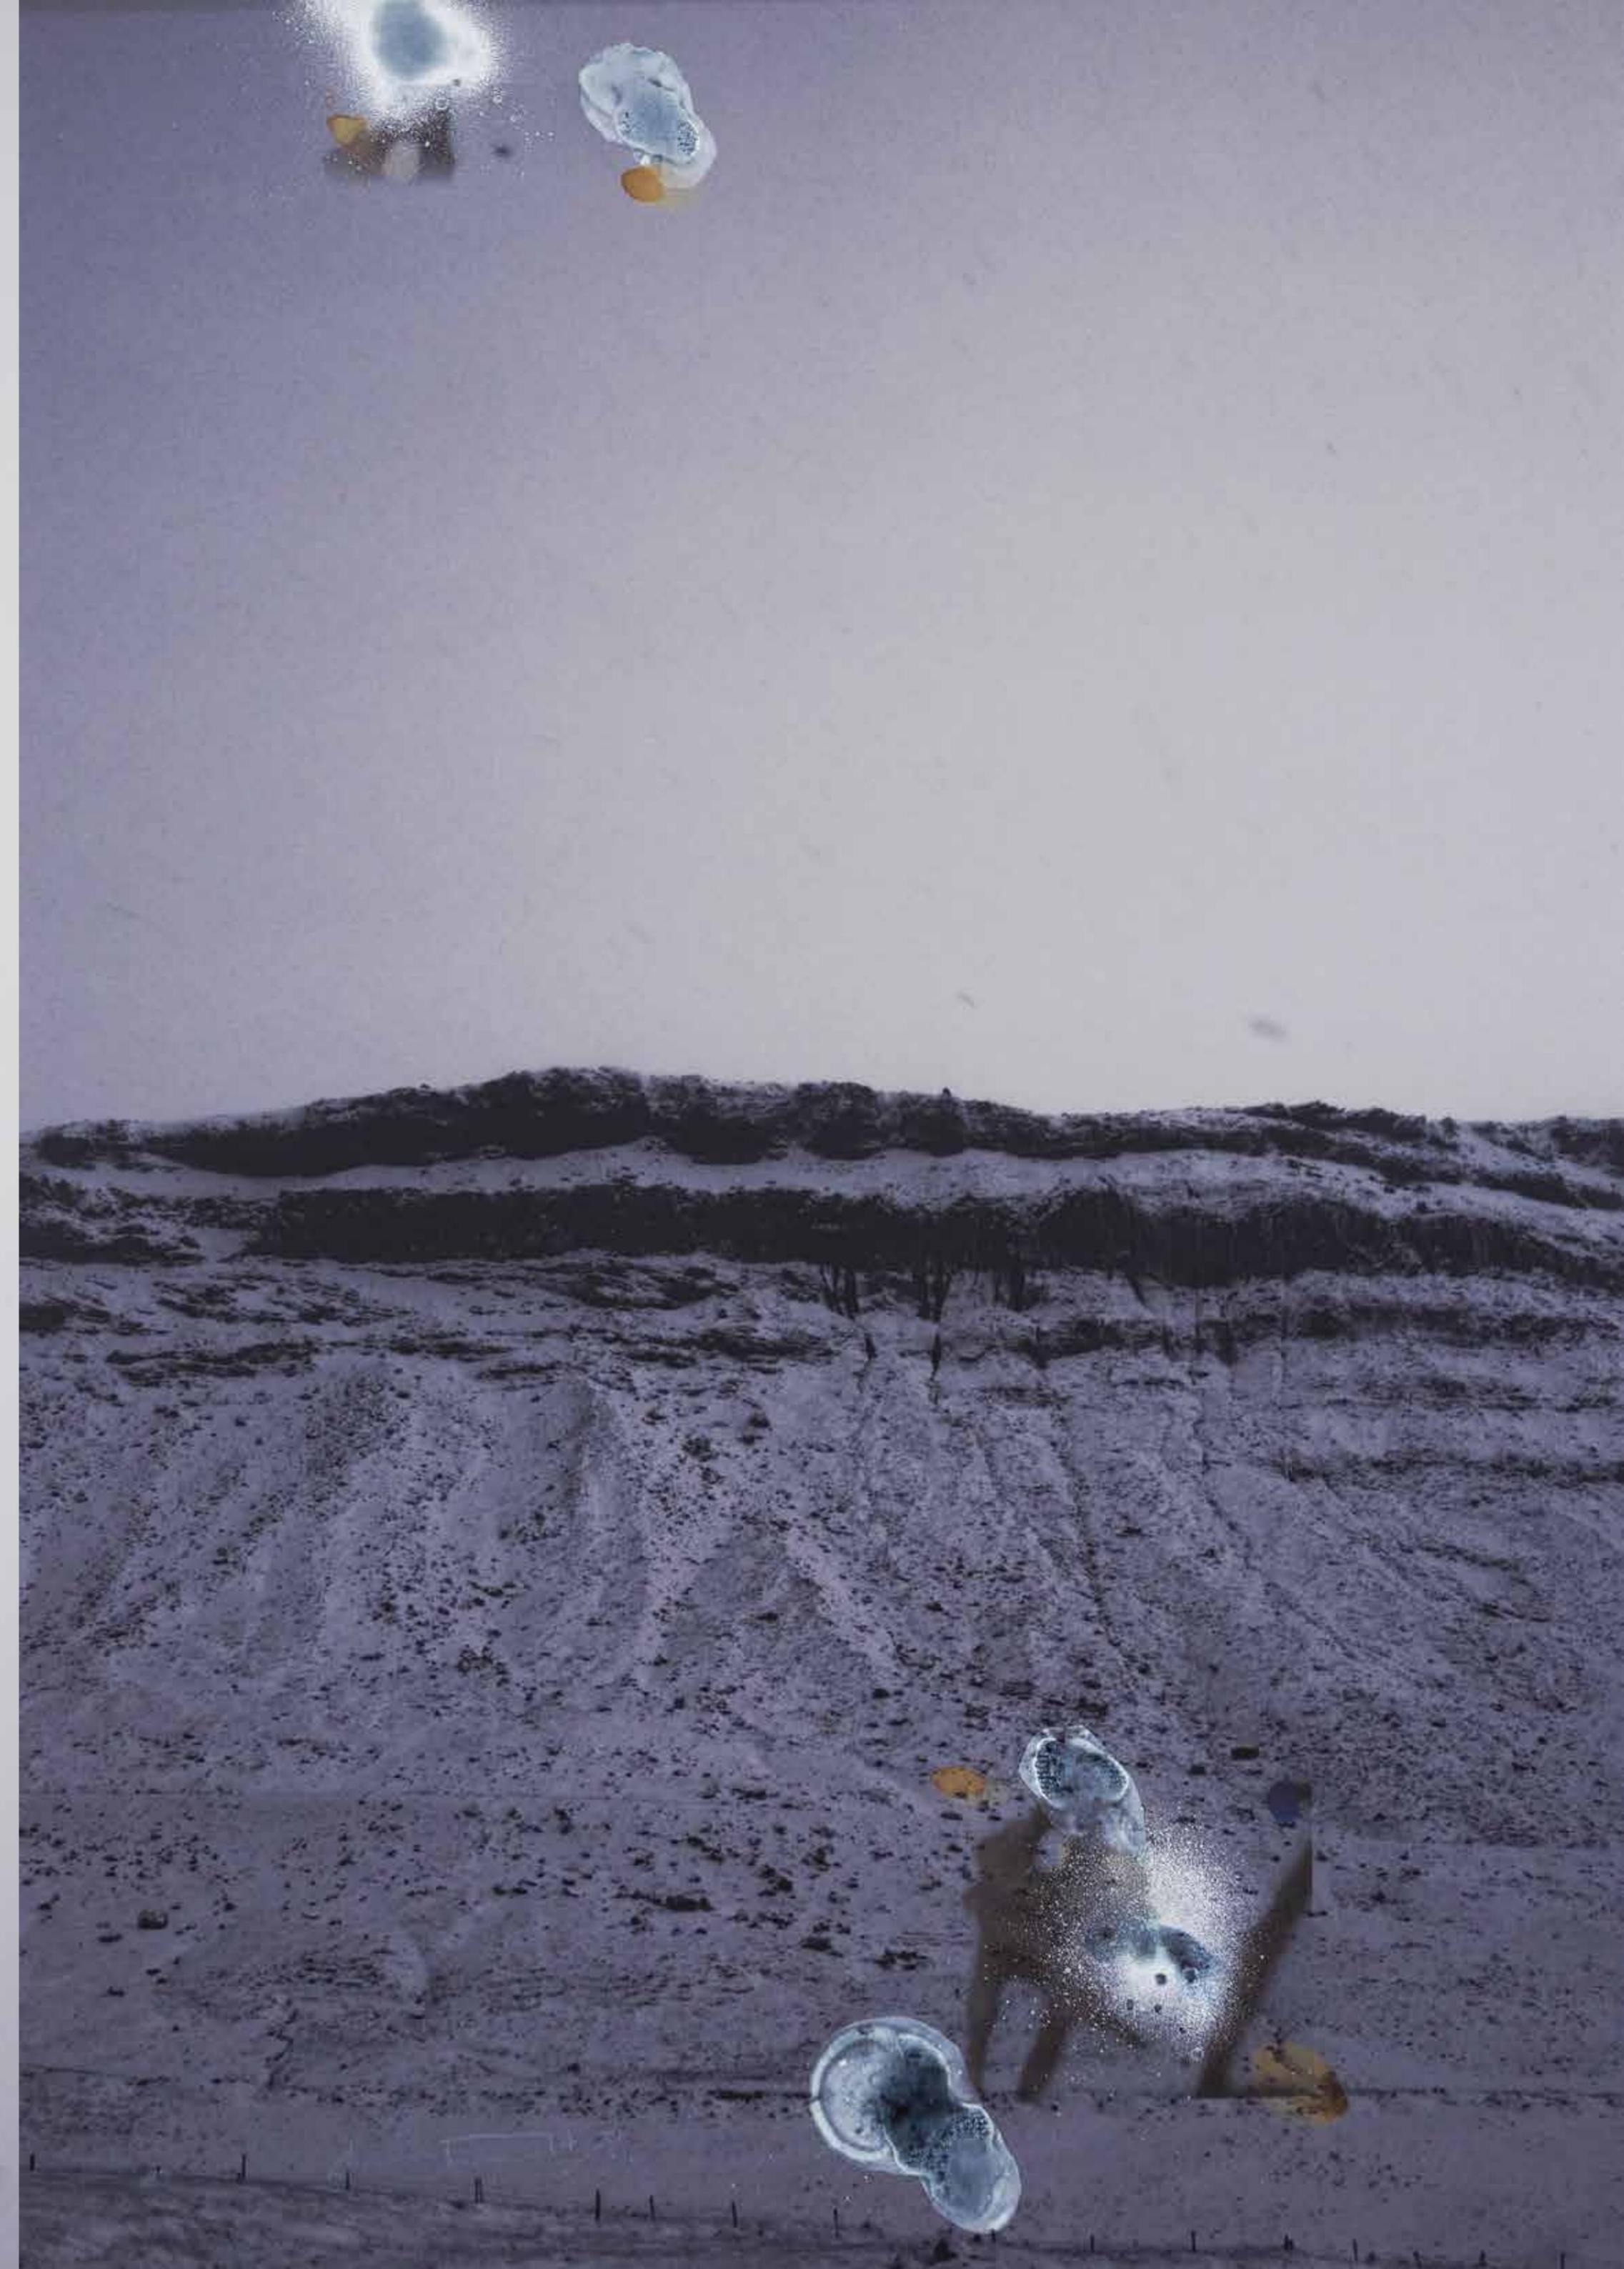

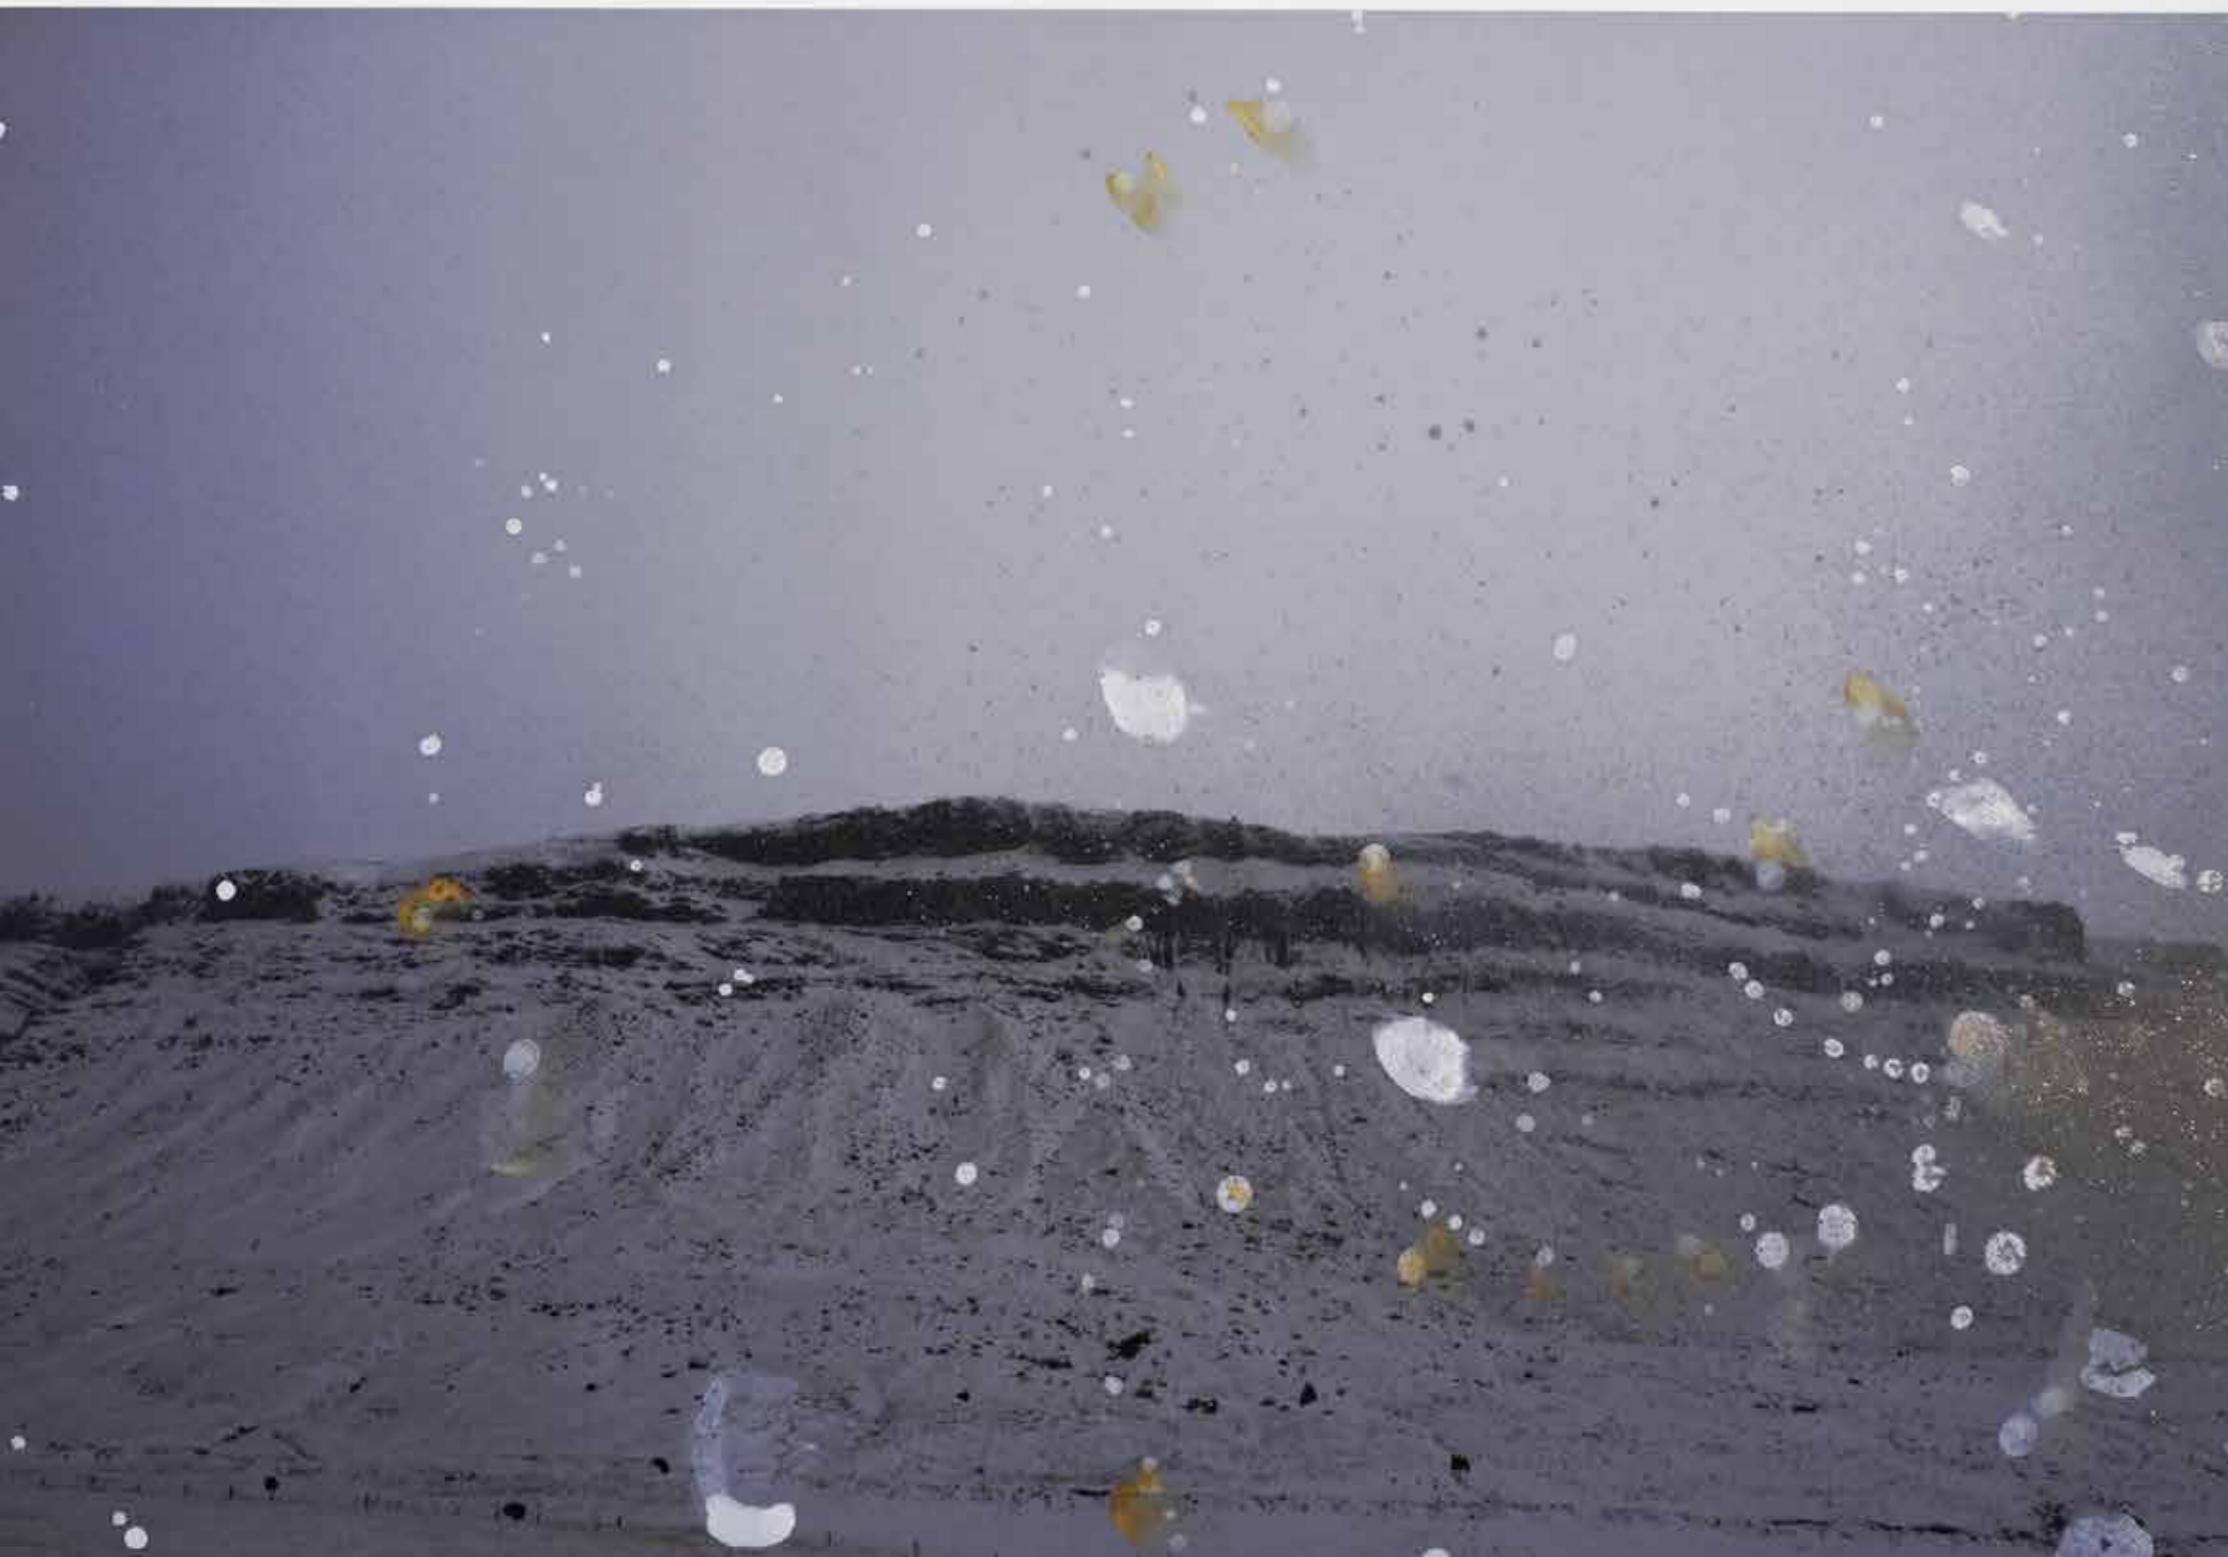

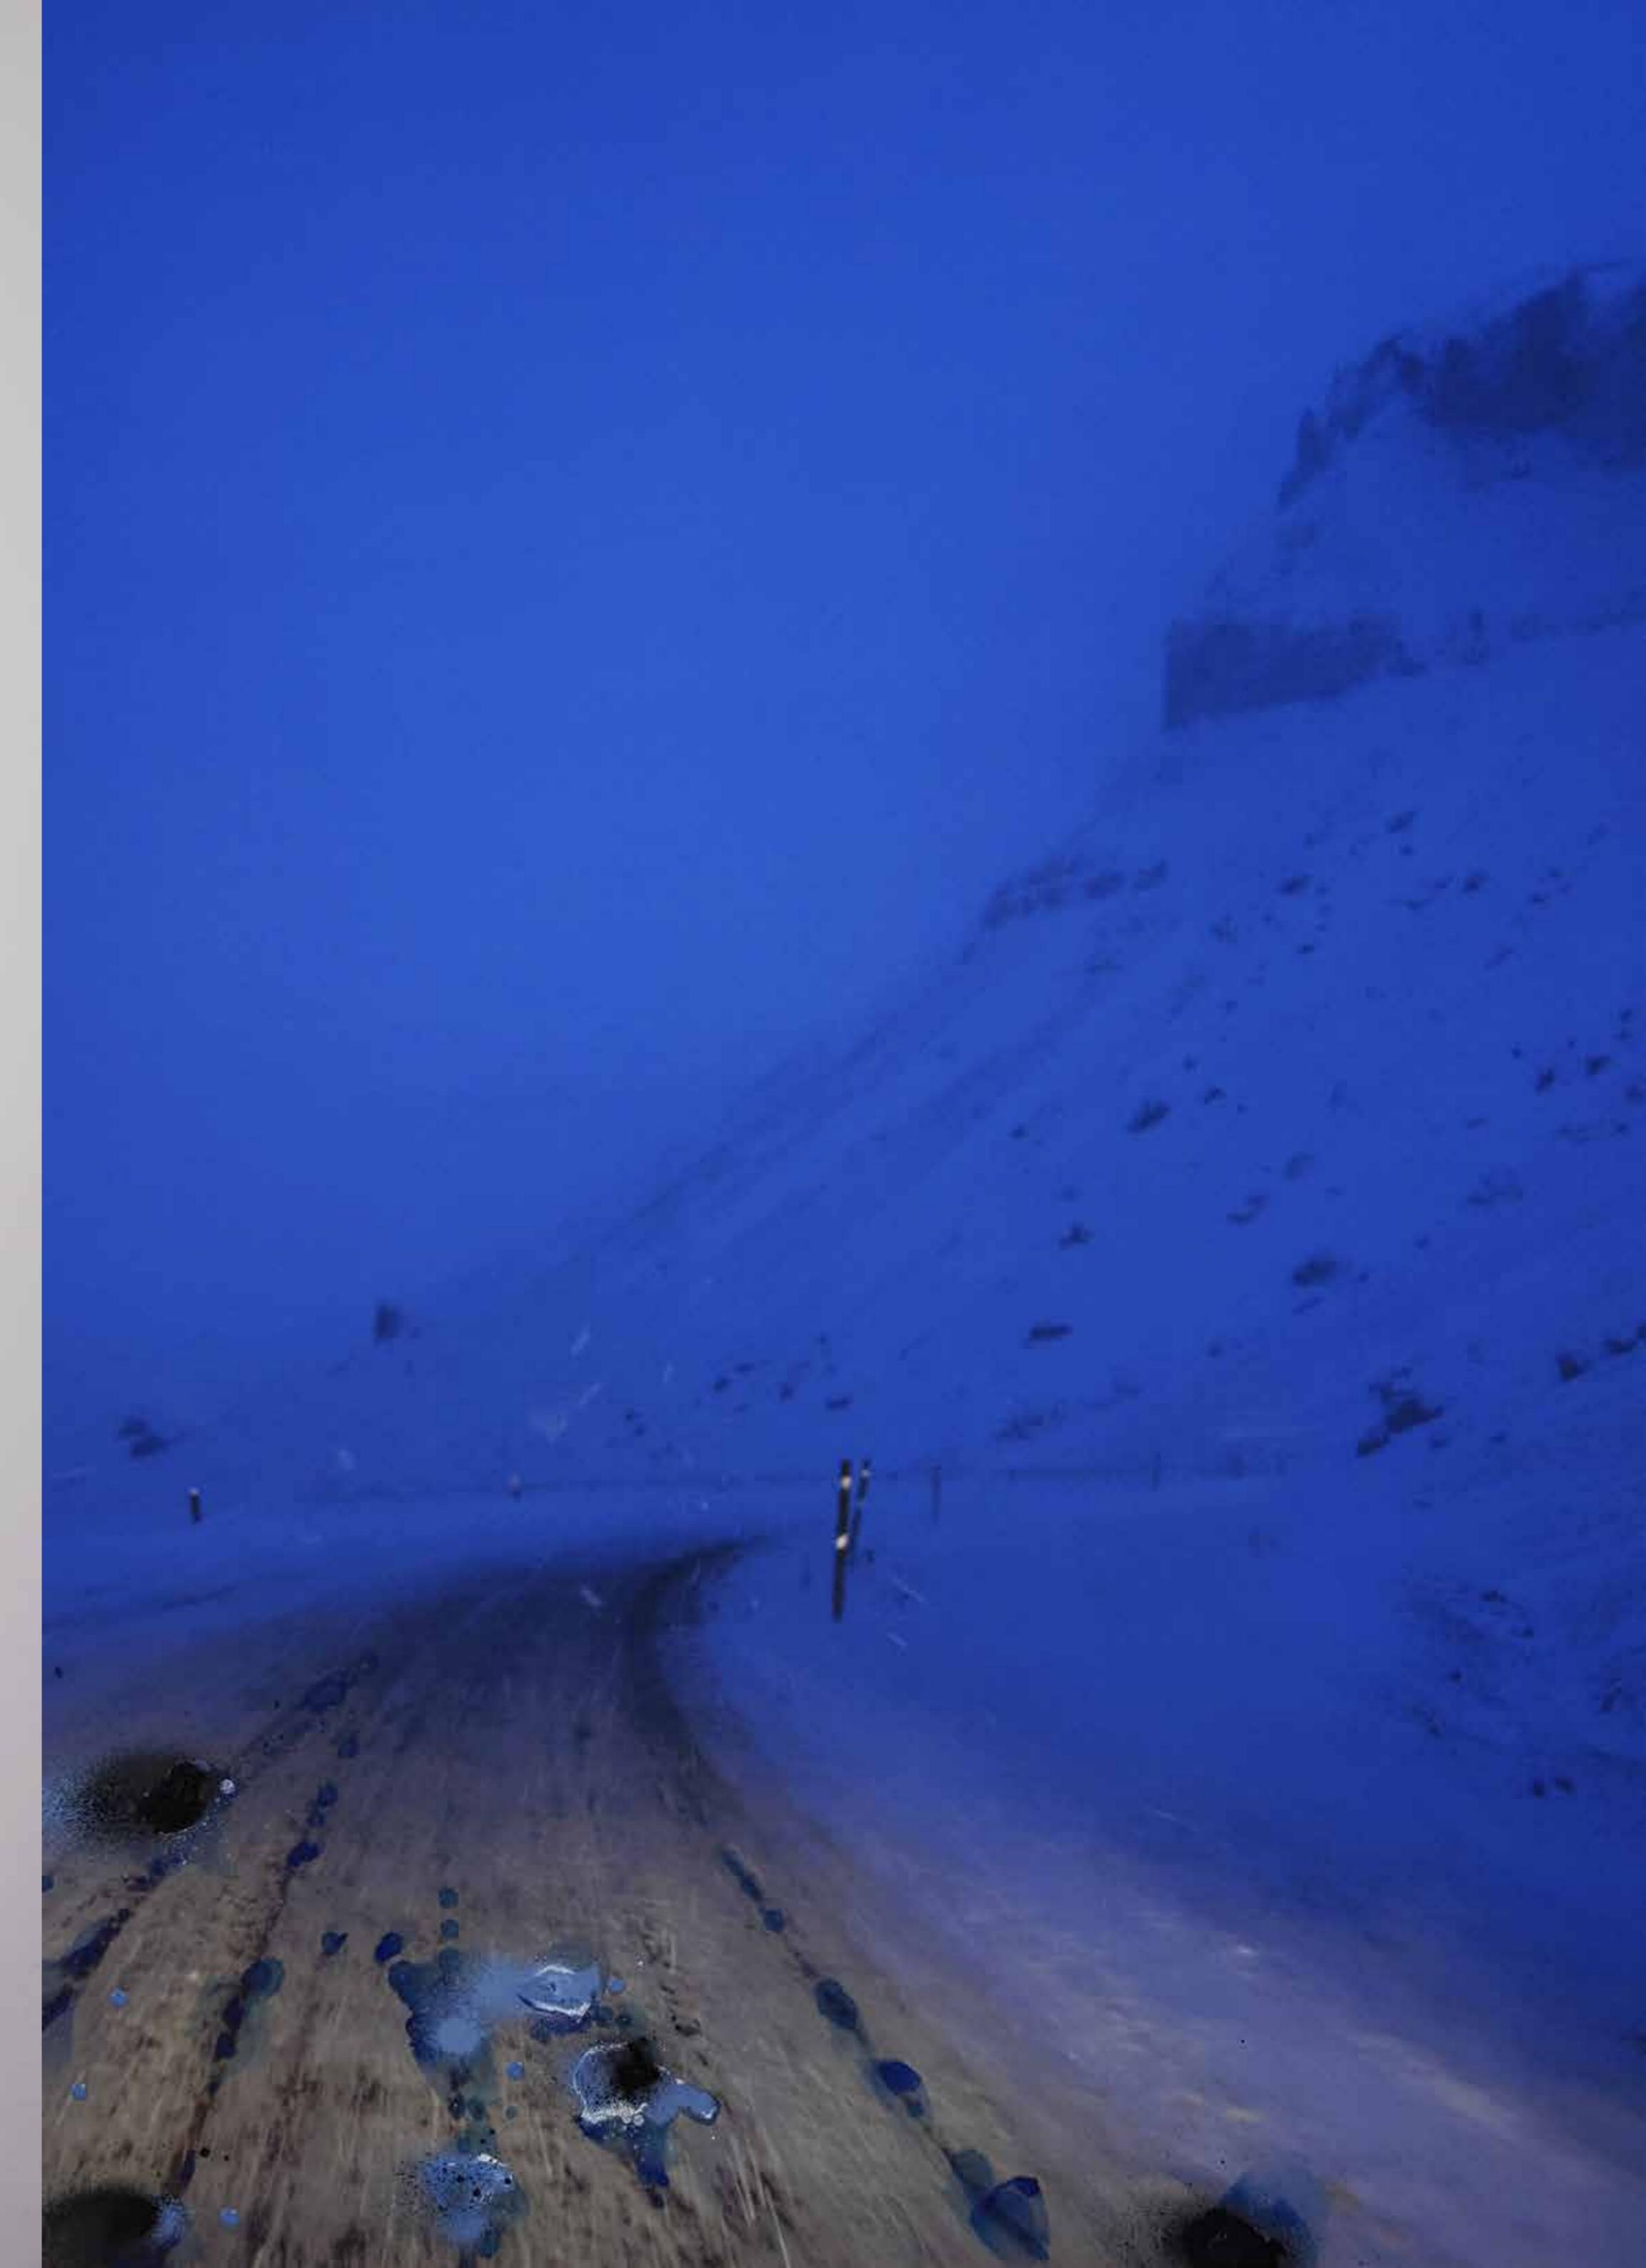

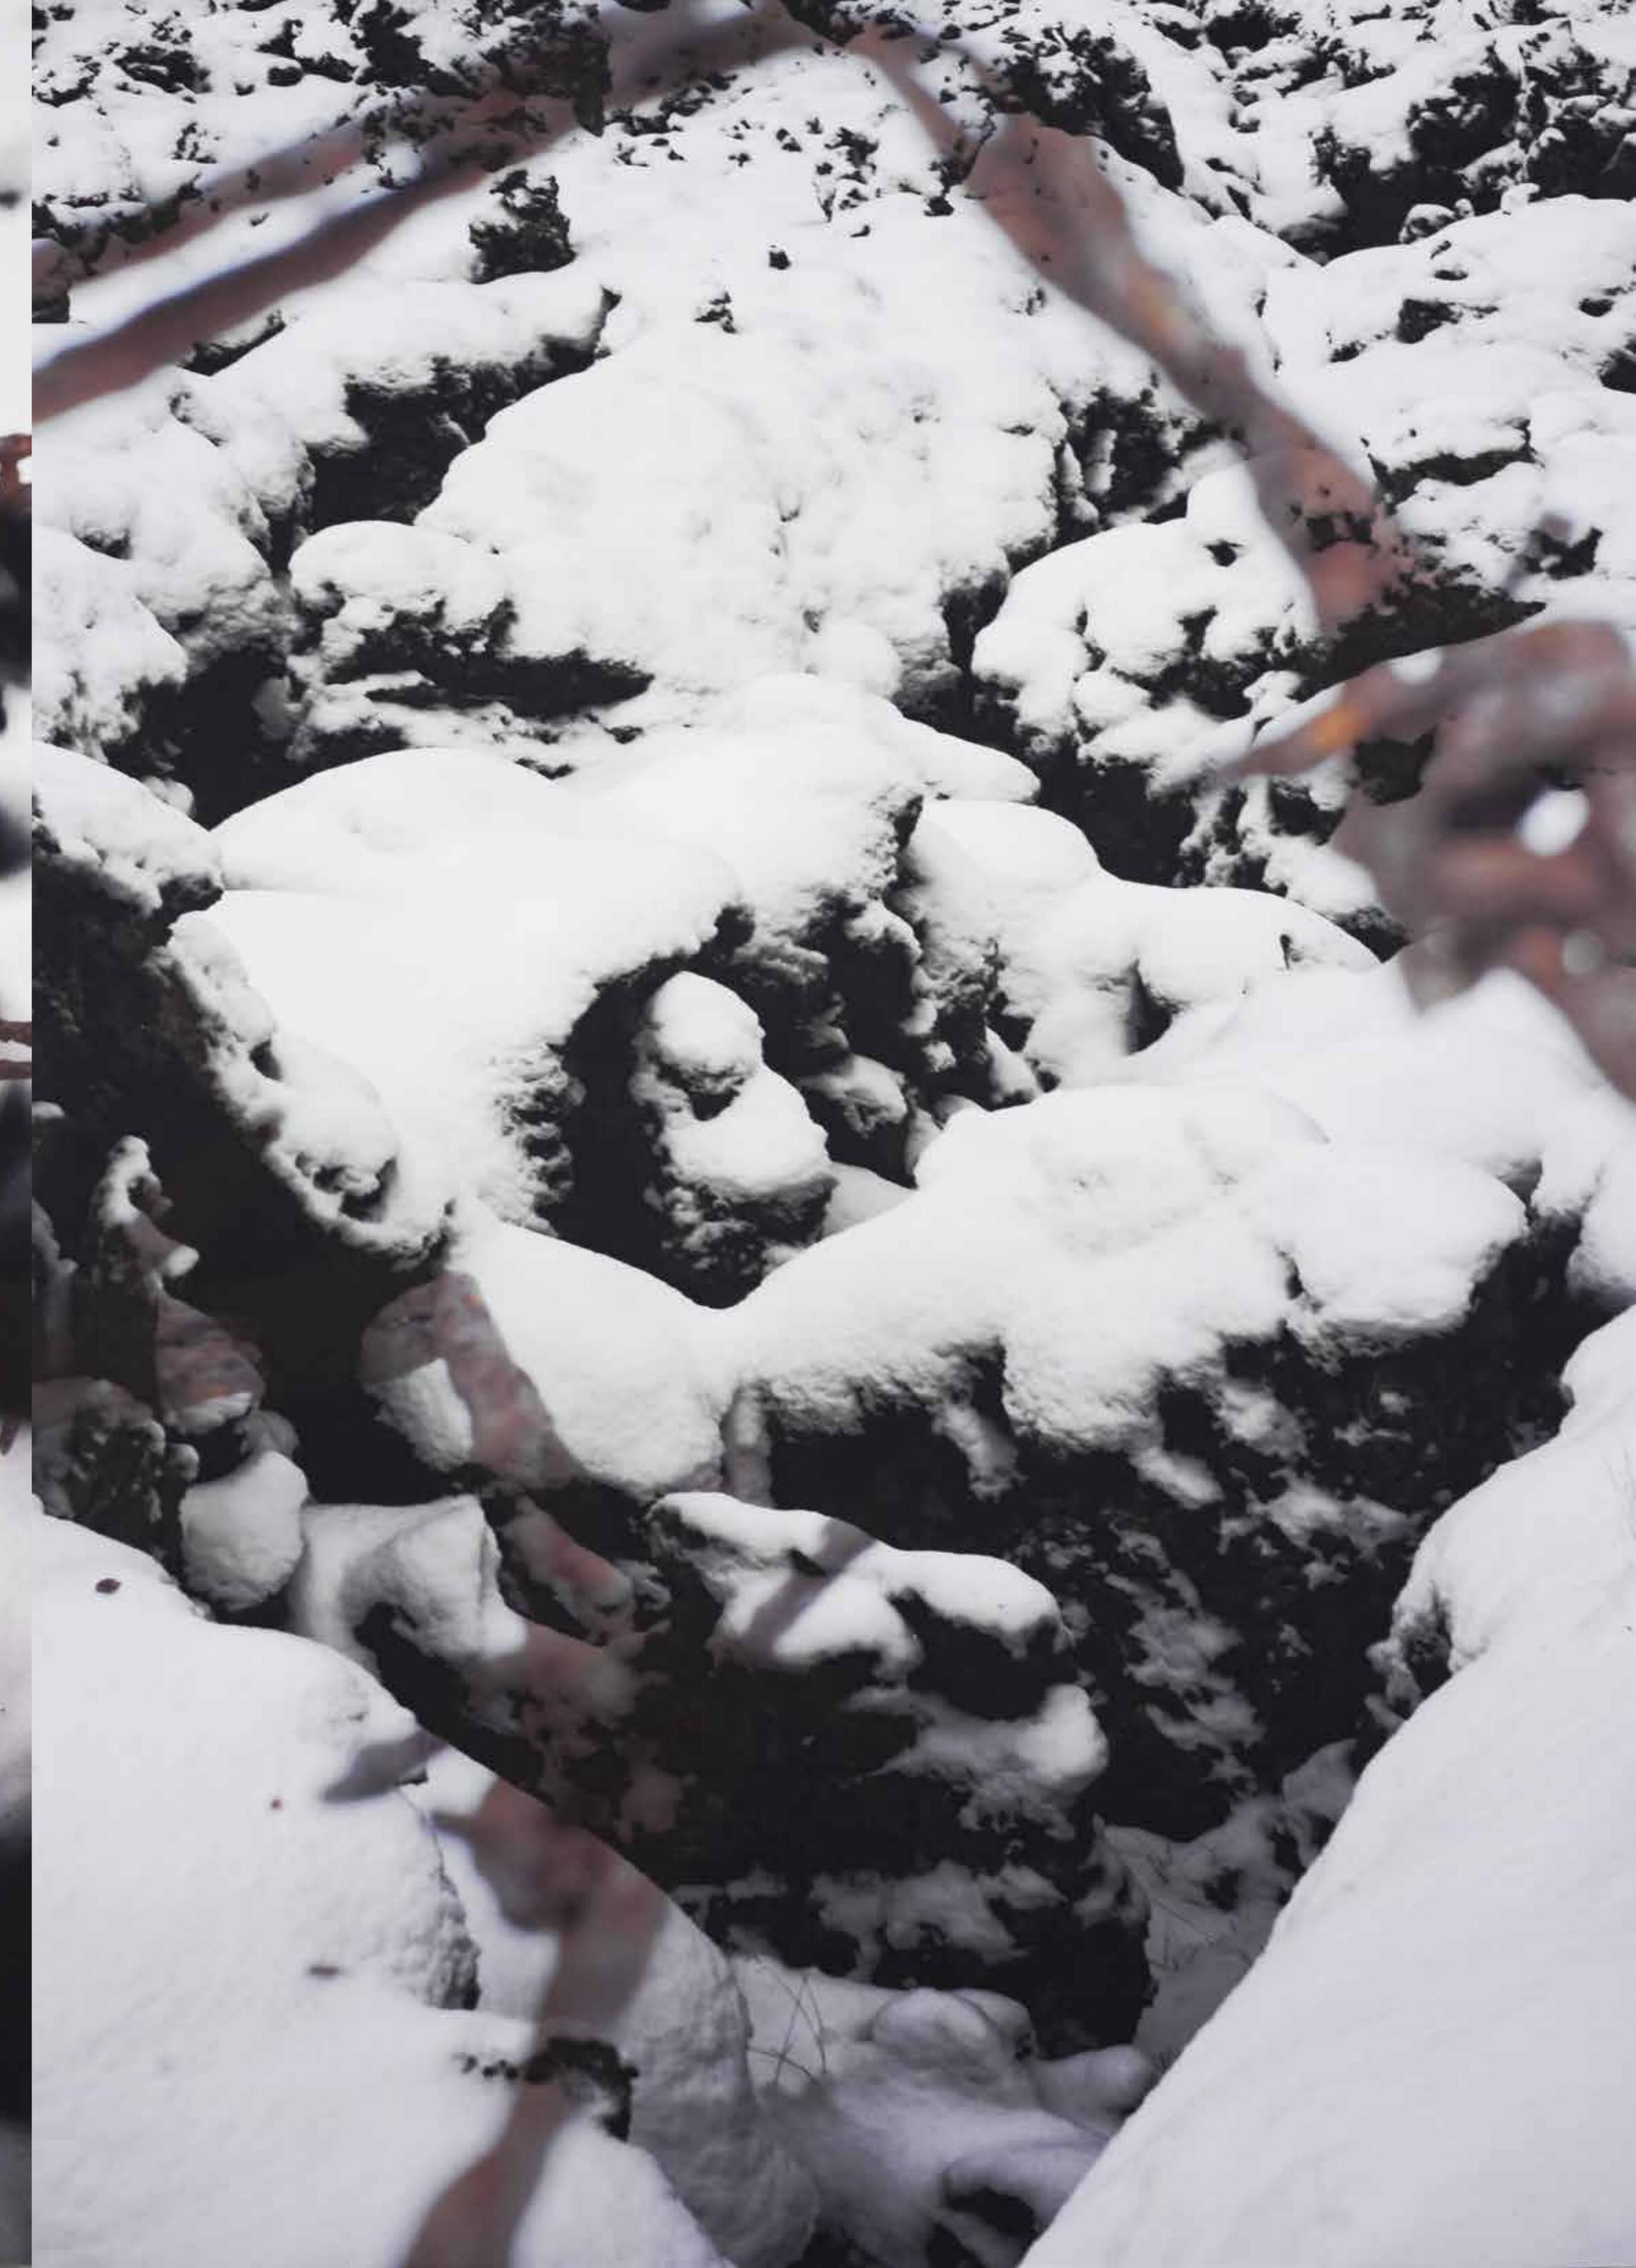

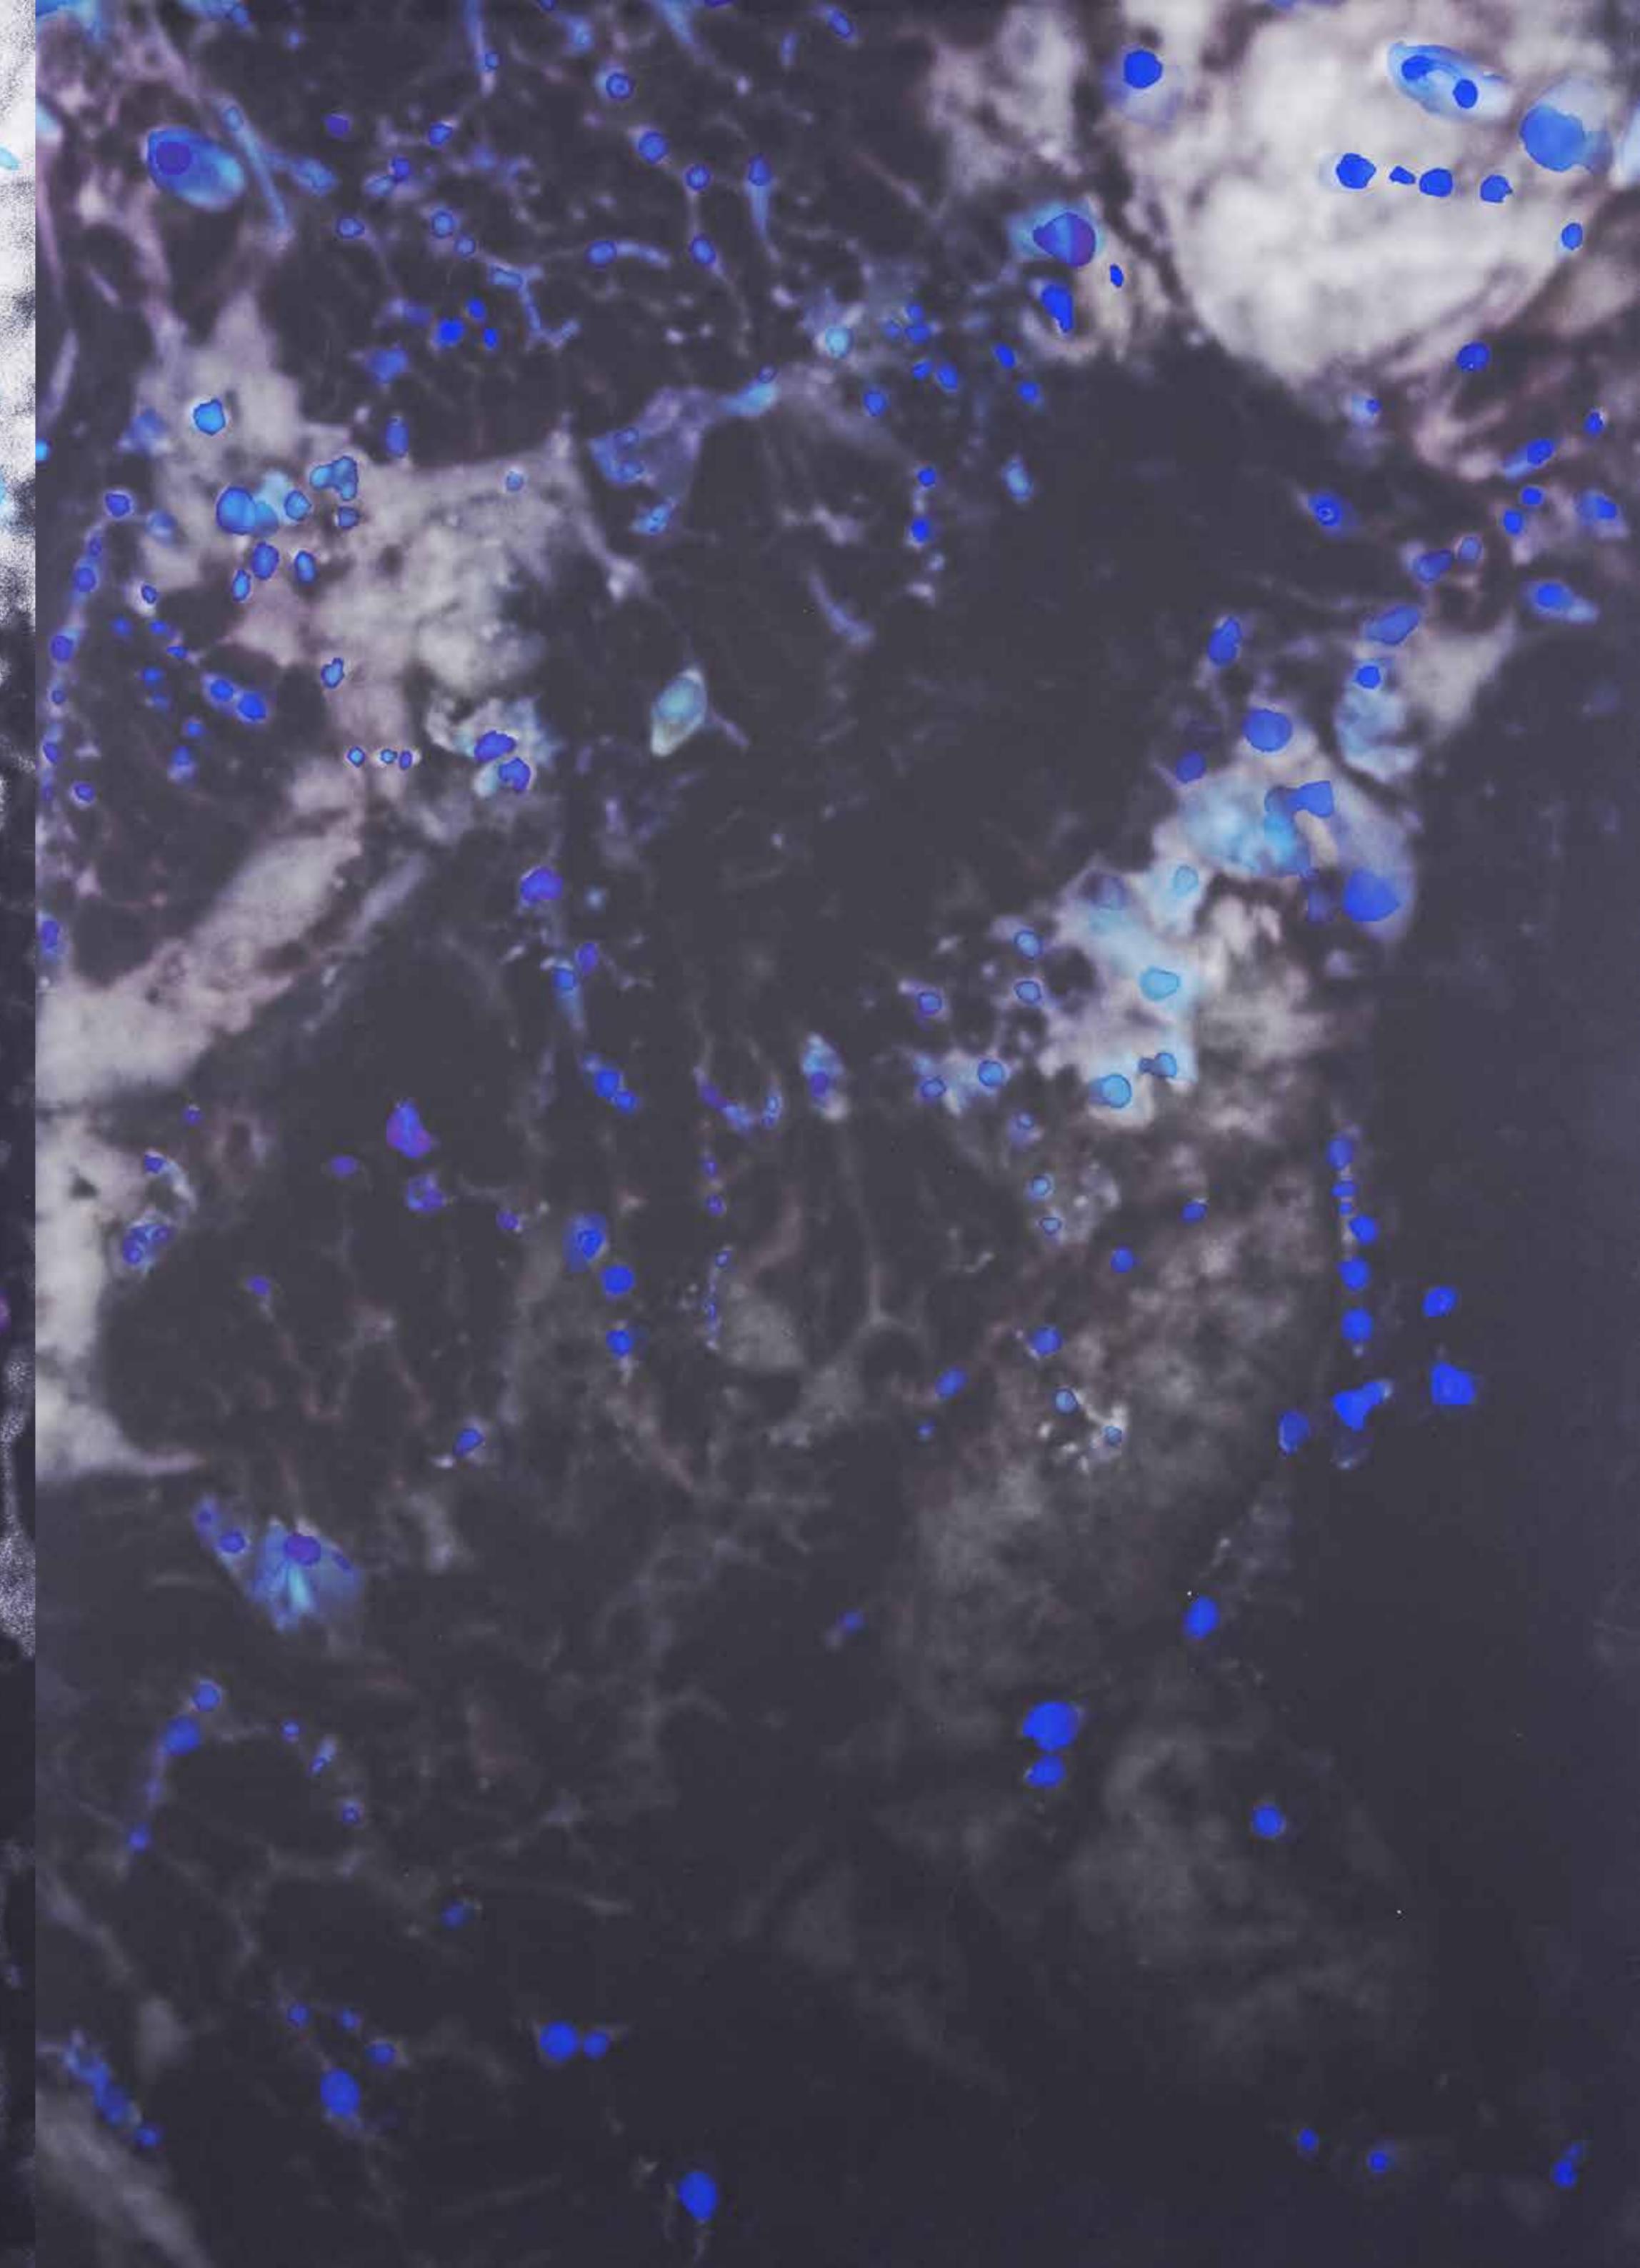

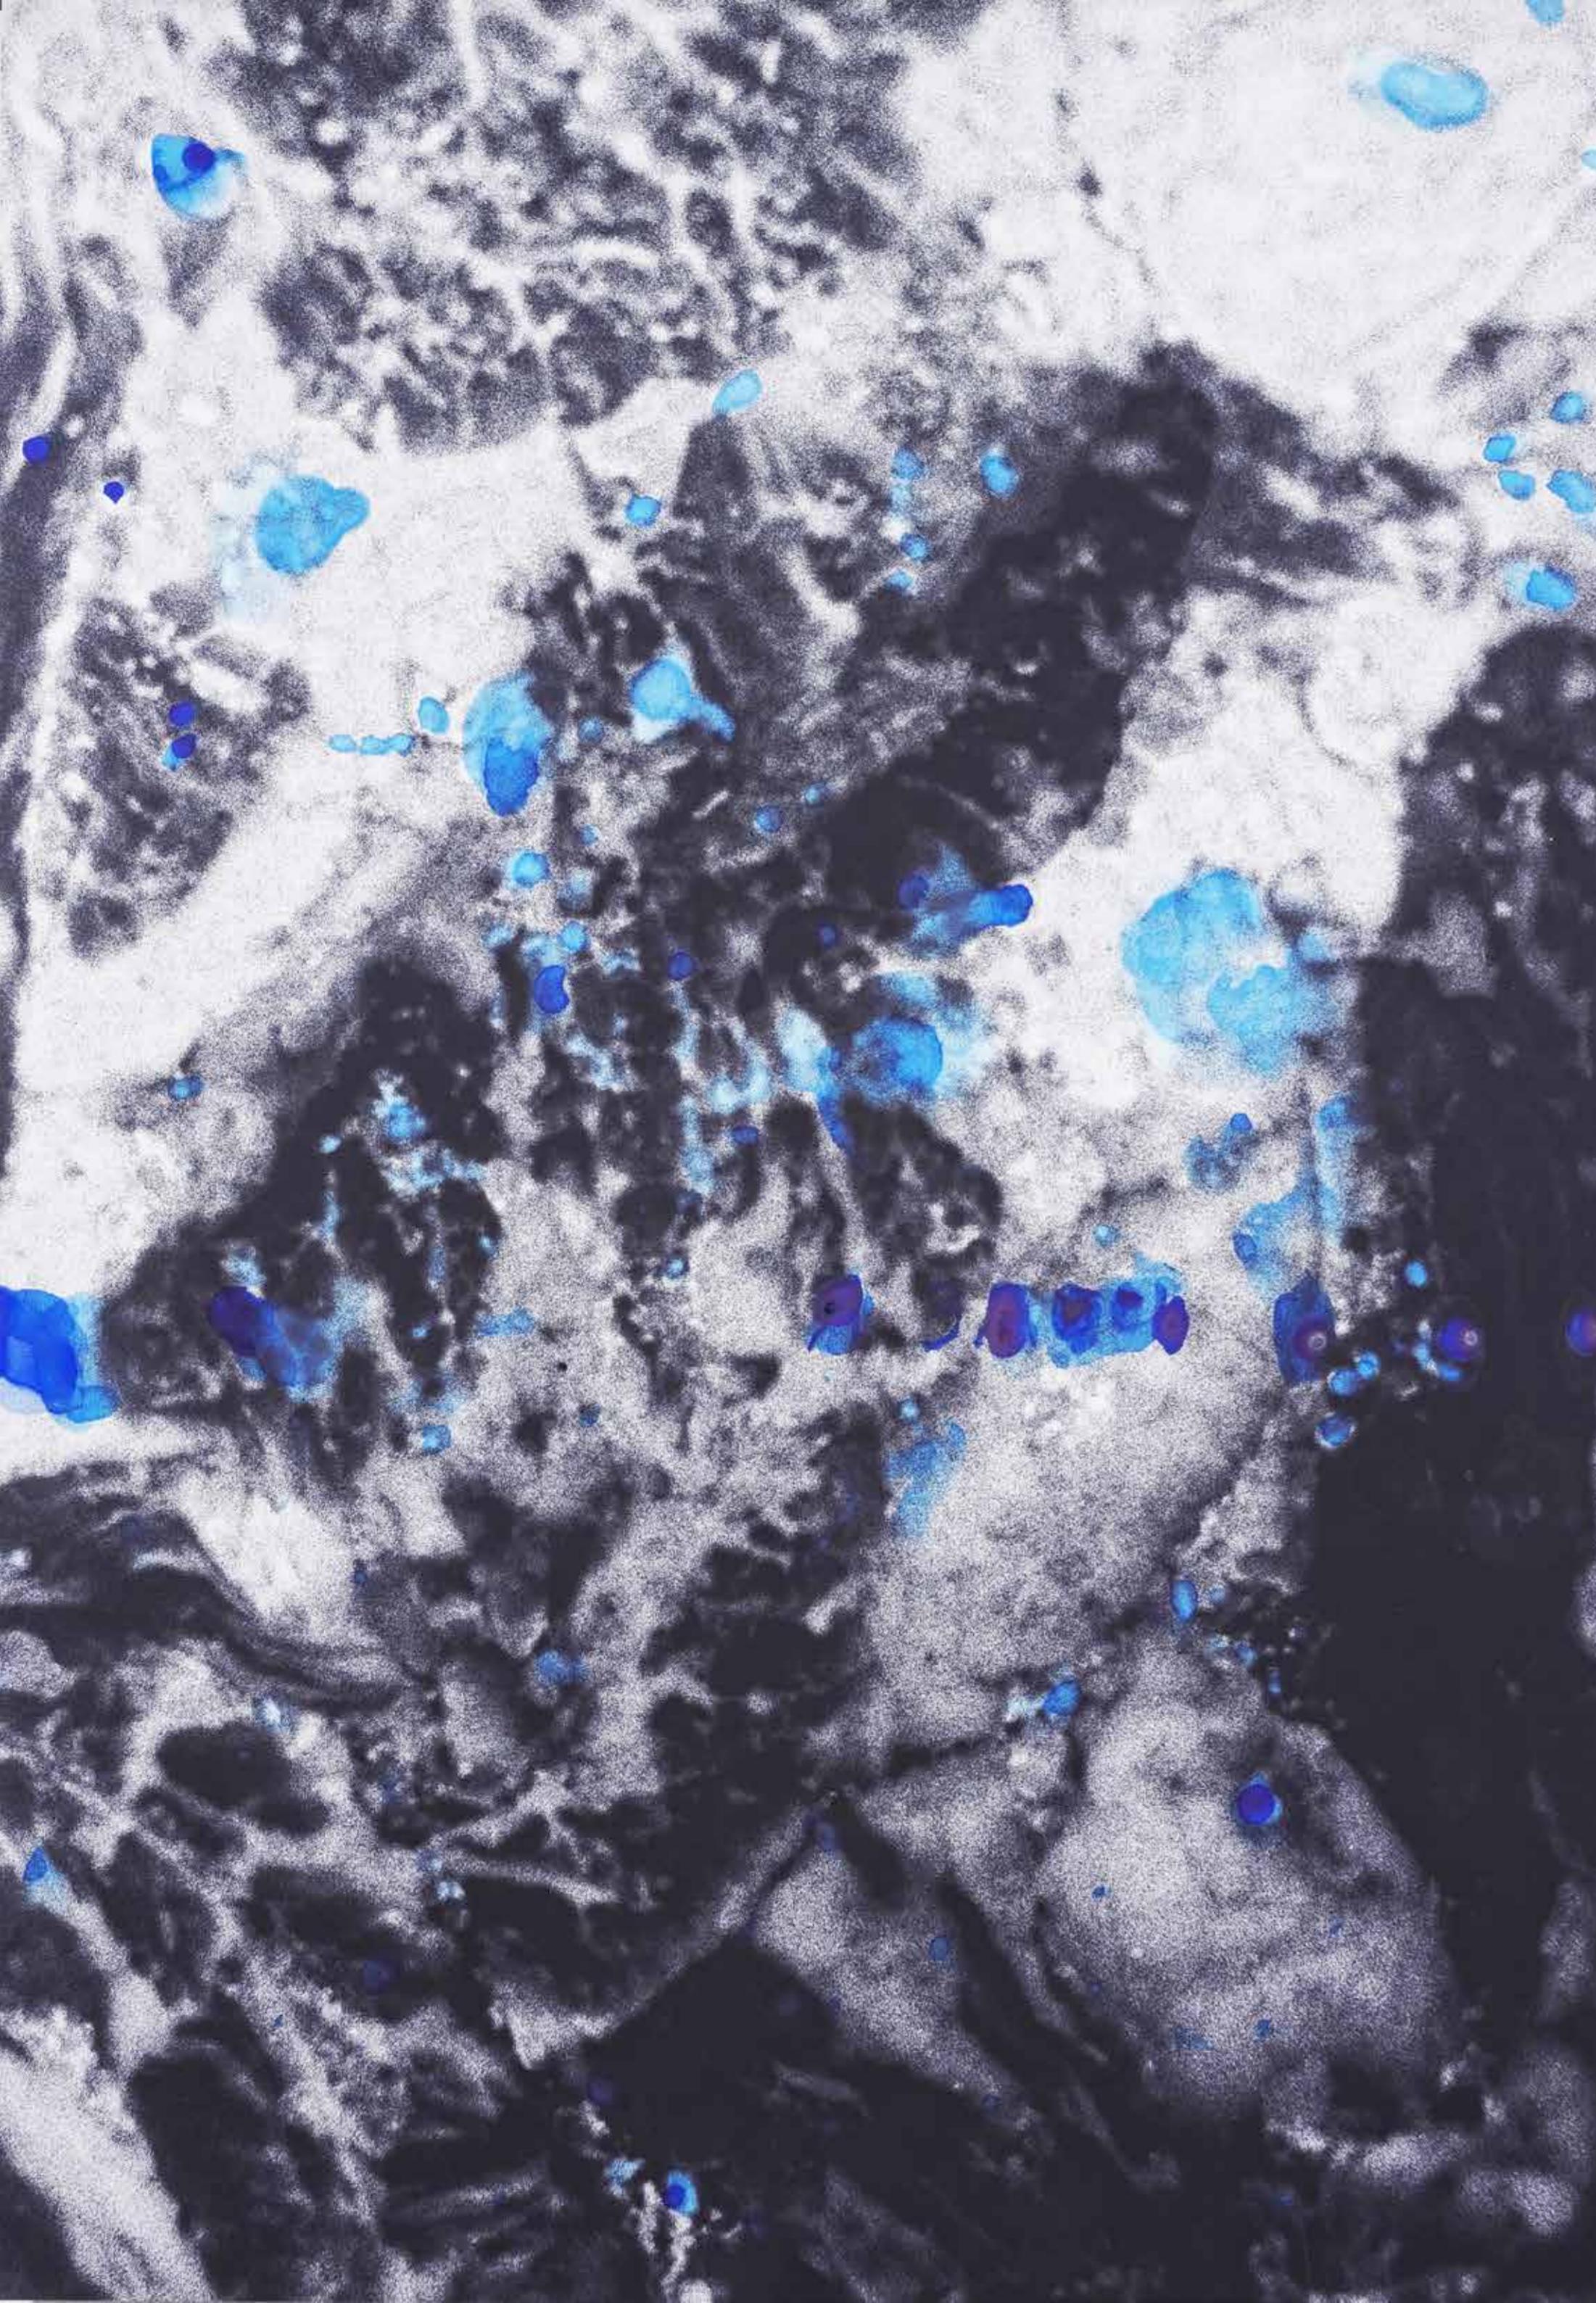

I am no longer a stranger here
neither do I belong
nor do I not belong
my message is to look
gather what it is that we have seen

because we have crossed the river
the wind offers only a numb pondering of cold
no longer expecting more than what has been given
nor wondering how it happened that I came to this place
there is no way to clear the haze in which we observe
no way to know that we have undergone another day
the silent snow of thought melts before it has a chance to stick
where I am is anyone's guess
the gates to nowhere multiply and the present is so far away
so deeply far away

we anticipate the fallout of our gestures and the response to our misreading
only to see there is a flaw
not in the sense that it is less than perfect
rather that it is unconsidered
left unnoticed
left unopened
left untold
scratching that part of the mind that can not let go of the conditions for our seeing

