

SOUNDS

My sound map features the familiar noises of Millbank, a selection based on a personal experience of moving through this part of London over two days in the autumn of 2016. I recorded and organised my findings into five categories: the sounds of nature, leisure, people, warning and machinery. The map is an interactive circuit board. Touching the screw tops activates the sounds, using one sense to access another. This engagement invites interactants to anticipate the kinds of sounds associated with the screws based on their location on the map.
