

Theodora Christia

Theodora Christia started her studies in Psychology in 2016 in Panteion University, in Greece. She obtained her bachelor in 2020, writing a thesis and publishing the relevant article, about the correlation between comorbidity (substance use disorder and psychotic symptoms) and quality of life, while doing her internship in the Psychiatry Department of General University Hospital of Ioannina. In 2020, she started her four-year training in CBT at the Greek Behavioral research Company in Thessaloniki. One year later, in 2021, she started the master Clinical Neuropsychology at Leiden University.

I am working in this research group as an intern for my Master of Psychology. My main part in this project is coding behavior of children participating in this project and to train other students on encoding behavior.
