

Give Attention to a Text

Choose three texts from The Compost, based on spontaneous curiosity, from reading the titles.

Choose three texts (not from The Compost) that you have been wanting to read, but couldn't find the time for - be they poetry, scores, interviews, websites, sound recording, videos etc.

Choose a time frame and a place for the reading session, maybe one session for each text, or one session for all.

Decide what kind of attention you will give to the text (think about what temporality, what context, what body posture are you reading in) – what is framing your attention?

During the session, take some notes, or save some quotes (spontaneously).

Based on your notes and/or quotes, create material of your own (a short letter, a drawing, a poem, an essay or something else).
