

Text to be read aloud by one participant to another before beginning their walk

Please take your time when reading this information to make sure you understand the instructions for the walk. You may repeat the following script as many times as is necessary before beginning.

Welcome to HALL12 – Encounter Activism.

You will now be standing with your walking companion.

Give each other a wave.

[participants wave at one another]

This is how you'll be communicating for the duration of your walk – silently and physically. In part, you'll be guided by the three following instructions:

1. Participants remain two metres apart at all times.
2. Participants must not talk or use other forms of formal communication (e.g. sign language etc.) during their walk.
3. You can take any route you want, as long as you get from A-B.

But you'll also be guided by your own intuition, the architecture of the city and the movements of one another.

HALL12 - Encounter Activism has been conceived as a passive activist response to current social distancing measures, inviting you to occupy a space for solidarity with an unknown other by moving through the city together.

You may now begin.
