

THE IRISH TIMES

Sun, Feb 4, 2018

NEWS

SPORT

BUSINESS

OPINION

LIFE & STYLE

CULTURE

TV, Radio, Web > TV & Radio Reviews

Ireland's Got Talent: Everything you need to know

[...]

but. However, for the last audition of the day, the tone shifts from cheery to strange. Self-proclaimed “telepathy rock star” Eddie Dean is conducting PhD research in UCC on nonphysical communication, and for his act, he attempts to read the judges’ minds using a blindfold and picture cards and strips out of his tailored pinstripe suit down to his monogrammed jocks for ... transparency? To quote a mystified Jason Byrne, “I was off me banger watching you”.

On Ireland's Got Talent, anything goes and just when you think that the smallness of Ireland might make the auditions predictable, between stripping psychics, nervous parrots, multiple magicians and a nation of tiny dancers, this show finds a way to surprise you.