

Soft beating, small ladder

Listening transcript (excerpt no. 3)

1	2	3
scratching my forehead scratching my scalp with sounds stroking my arms with sounds with chords from the piano rolling ... down my spine, scratching my scalp with scratchy sounds rolling down my spine with piano chords something in the background like ... strings of the piano being beaten with some ... mmmaybe metallic instruments	moths to a flame even though the music is very eh ... tender it's still reaching for the light very soft hmmmmmee huumm irregular walk in the background, small scratchy sounds morphed into a bumblebee ... buzzing ... buzzing	the sand lion is just making this little grave where the insects getting caught like a little bit like Jabba The Hutt baaaoooh baaaoooh hello	the high range frequency one is a little, a little harsh for me down my neck flowing ... chords ...	all the sand he's getting full tonight that's for sure distant slow irregular walking wondering about and wondering about something new	reading the newspaper just to get sure that you get this cycle of life, eh, right before entering everyday life is it really possible	nice with these ... different sonic artifacts or ... different references living within the sounds gives more like different directions, which makes me curious, it's nice ...
		hmm ... dramatic